

Sir James

$\text{♩} = 105$

There was a lad so sweet and wise, who walked with a re - gal Then on one wet and wind - y day, when sharp cries pierced the The lords and knights from Lond - on town, A cross the sea they air; Who danced and sang to his heart's de - light, and air; James helped a maid - en in dis - tress, a - came, The queen in vel - vet, gold and silk, Made rit.

played with - out a care. A gall - ant young lad, he lone and in des - pair. This brave young lad, so haste to royall - y pro - claim: I knight you Sir James, bow rit.

braved north winds, A hand - some young lad and so deb-on - air; A deft - ly he walked, This strong young lad he lent her a hand; This grace - full - y down, An hon - our, Sir James, to be - stow this on you; I merr - y young lad, he frolick - ed a - bout, A charm - ing young lad and court - ous young lad, so gent - ly he spoke, This nob - le young lad, so ask you, Sir James, to dance a gav - otte, And eat cus - tard pie be - fore

CHORUS

oh, so fair. jumped and danced in the still of the morn - ing, kind and so grand. He I say a - dieu.

Touched tree tops while on his swing; And he skipped and hopped 'til day closed its eyes, And dreamt of what morn - ing would bring. He drummed and played with his cast - le and knights, His grey plas - tic sword at his side, Then the glitter - ing stars sang him to sleep, While rays from the moon stayed in - side.