There once was a man from the south of France, Who There once was a litt - le pet oct - o - pus, Who There once was a long legg - ed spi - der, That There once was a giant of an el - e - phant, Who There once was a grouch - y old bill y - goat, Who spoke with a great deal of arr - o - gance; 'Til head ov - er fell on a plate of as - par - a - gus; It splashed on the lived in a bott - le of ci - der; Un - til a lad - want - ed to look cute and el - e - gant; At a big fash - ion had a big bull - frog stuck in his throat; When the frog struggl - ed heel, he slipped on a peel, And crowds gather - ed chest of a prim din - ner guest, And the own - er thought

 - y at af - ter - noon tea, Drank some now he show, she bought a pink bow, And now she goes free, the goat screamed with glee, That he could at

'round as he lost his pants. it was hil ar - i - ous.
lives in side of her.
plac - es where oth - ers can't.
last sing the sweet-est note.

The musical score consists of two staves. The upper staff is in treble clef and contains a melody of quarter and eighth notes. The lower staff is in bass clef and contains a simple accompaniment of chords and rests. The lyrics are written in two columns between the staves. The piece concludes with a double bar line and a fermata over the final note of the melody.
